ANNOUNCEMENTS

John W. Satterly, Jr., 1915

Office: 1015

THURSDAY, JUNE 29, 1905

We are glad to report Miss Beale Kay's much better.

Mr. George Shirley and wife of Pleasant Hill, were visiting at the home of Mr. Mark Crouch and wife at Williamsburg Sunday.

We are very sorry to report Mr. Bob Williams very sick with typhoid fever. We would be glad to hear of his recovery soon.

There is a large crowd at the hotel at present and they are expecting a great many more by Thursday as Thursday night is the annual hop which generally attracts a large crowd.

It seems that some one was afraid that the rain might injure the wheat so they wouldn't be enough for them, so they visited the mill at this place Friday night and laid in a large supply of flour and new to each caught to be seen into.

Little Asa Burn, the grand son of Mr. N. H. Armstrong, had a very narrow escape from being drowned one day last week. He was dipping water from a large pond and fell in but as a neighbor, Esau Coulter, was nearby rescued him in time to save his life.

We have rain and plenty the last week. Some think it has been an injury to the harvesting crops but as providence dispenses what will have to be made. While it has injured some what wheat it has been a benefit to other things.

As news received will close my untimely letter this week and will try to do better next time even if this falls in the waste basket, but I am expecting to read some very interesting letters anyway from a few places which are all right.

MYACINTH.

Mackville.

It is nice and pleasant for so much rain. Wheat harvest is a lot over and we hope it will not be damaged very much on account of the weather.

Mr. E. B. Porter left Monday afternoon for Denton, Texas, his home, after spending about ten days with his relatives here. They all enjoyed his visit very much. He came on the excursion to the reunion with the Texas party then came on here. There were quite a number of Texans who took advantage of the excursion rats and visited their old home.

Mr. Andrew McFarridge and Miss Kay Satterly were visiting at Mackville Sunday from Harrodsburg.

Mr. J. L. Hayden and wife are with his mother, Mrs. Shewmaker, for a while from Indianapolis.

The work is progressing nicely with the new church. They have had the roof put on and will soon be ready for the inside work.

News From The County.

Happenings Among the county People as Reported by our Correspondents.

Valley Hill.

Two nice rains within a week make us feel good, and the broad happy grin is visible on the faces of the farmers who were somewhat behind with their work on account of the spring drouth.

Mrs. Margaret Offutt has returned home after an extended visit to relatives in the School Hill vicinity.

Mrs. R. L. Gostley spent Tuesday with Mrs. W. F. Moran.

R. L. Gostley a wife visited relatives in Springfield Sunday. Messrs. Will James has been hauling lumber from this place all week. He recently purchased it from S. P. Derringer.

C. P. Gostley visited friends near Maud Sunday.

I forgot to answer that question asked by Litchy, am inclined to think he got the thing wrong, my bible don't say anything about that kind of a thing. I suppose he did him if so I will ask him if he knows a "how to be wise" or any of the correspondents.

The first week was harvest week in our vicinity. A most of the small grain is in. The wheat and rye crops were about an average. The fields were generally well filled but the crop was only this season, or at least didn't sprout as it should have. The outlook is for a good yield of oats this season which is one of the greatest feed products upon the market.

Owing to sufficient cause the Rev. Williams, of Springfield, failed to fill his regular appointment at this place. We regret very much to have missed a sermon as he is a very interesting and touching lecturer. It has even been our privilege to hear. He is indeed a man possessed with the divine spirit. He has the power to express his feelings and thoughts in words.

My friends of Miss Graham VanArsdale regret seriously the death of her father, Mr. VanArsdale, who was the life and joy of her family and the pride of all who knew her. She possessed beautiful traits of character, a kind word and a smile was always ready to greet any one and not only will the society circle feel a great loss but the church will also miss one of its best members.

The school opens at this place next Monday, July 3, with Miss Pearl Gostley as teacher, and the outlook is for a large attendance. Miss Gostley is well qualified for teaching and the students should progress nicely by a little effort on their side. The only thing between the school and great success is the water which is very bad and should be attended to immediately.

A young man who was a red neck and a family known as "The Devil's Cellar" attended the U. C. V. R. and as the lunch places were full, he was to go to the English Kitchen, which was a very good thing for him. He was very much surprised to find that his mind was dumber back to his birthplace and he suddenly came to a standstill, having been where he was going, but soon started with an air of delight when he said to a person near by "I am almost blind, can you tell me where to find the Devil's Cellar?" He had forgotten and force of habit caused him to mention his old resort instead of the English Kitchen.

We are glad to report Mrs. R. L. Arnold, who has been ill, to be better.

Hillsboro.

We have had some excellent rains during the past week and so much has all been put out, wheat and rye has about all been harvested and will make a heavy yield. Timothy and clover will make about half crop, corn is looking well and weeds are getting out of sight.

Mrs. J. D. Sutherland is an extended visitor to her parents at Westport.

Mrs. J. S. Laman and daughter, Misses Maud and Eva, visited at E. M. Shewmaker's last week. Miss Maud has about recovered from an attack of influenza which she caught while out of the city last week ago.

Z. P. Leachman bought a horse at Ponyville last week from Capt. Parks for $35. He also bought a buggy in town from the Leachman Company. Price unknown.

The Fenwick boys are anxious to play a trio of games with the Williamsburg ball team for the two best games. Both teams have some expert players and should arrangements be made for the games they would certainly attract a large crowd.

A. P. Stiles went to Lebanon last week to have a surgical operation performed to remove an abscess from the stomach, but Dr. McConder thought he had waited too long and that it could not be performed without causing death. He is very low at this writing and his loved ones are fearful that he is gradually approaching the end.

Fred Cheatham, wife and daughter, of Bowling Green, passed through here Sunday enroute to Polin to visit relatives.

S. H. Crook, of Silver Creek, who has black cow disease, has returned to his home from Lexington. She was just disappearing in the craze of Mr. Vesper and he is now anxiously awaiting the eruption of the mountain to get his cow.

Says: "When recovered, she will be one of the most remarkable cures in the world."

I. N. Shields the well known farmer of this vicinity informed us that he had a three year old horse that came near drowning last week in a spring. During the dry weather last fall he dug out a large spring to the depth of about nine feet, which since has filled up with water. In some way the horse fell into it, but when seen in time to be rescued he was rather shy of drinking there in the future.

A large crowd was out on Sunday evening to witness a review being day for the entire quarter and so carefully that each teacher drilled his class in review of his work.

This certainly speaks well for our school and may the teachers and pupils work assiduously with the same interest during the next quarter as they did during the one just past.

The members of the Christian church at this place have agreed on Rev. C. C. Allen to be in a series of meetings at the church in July or August. Rev. Allen is quite a pleasant speaker, and is regarded as one of the most successful speakers in the denomination. We need a good spiritual revival and should have a preacher who would lay aside doctrine and preach the principles of our every day life. We may get new preachers on the judgment day and unless we have a great spiritual awakening now we will be disappointed.

The Bible question that we asked in our letter some time ago still remains unanswered. It was given to our Sunday School and caught on napping. One bible reader said it was the 22nd chapter of Numbers, and another said it was not, another said it was the 23rd chapter of Numbers, and the third said it was the 24th chapter of Numbers, but if you will read the Bible, you will find it in the 22nd chapter of Numbers, verse 28th.

You will have an account of a character that lived, walked and talked on earth that never knew good nor evil, never was in Heaven or Hell. Now for the North and brother's question about the flood, will say that we have some queer opinions about the flood and what became of its water. We may tell them in the near future, but do not like to get too far into the water, for we can not swim. So come on brother with your attack on the solution of our question.

LILAC.

We have failed yet to learn of anyone getting better money out of their chickens than Mrs. E. G. Holiday bought a horse worth of chickens from one hen and has the hen and six chicks left.

We would suggest the hen be called "Middy, the Grubber."

The ground was too heavy to work most of last week on account of heavy rains, consequently there will be a great rush of work as soon as possible.

E. G. Holiday bought a horse from Mr. Lawrence Catlett for $25 and sold same to W. L. Graham for $30; he also bought two cows from W. L. Graham at $2 cents per lb. and one from James Graham and S. H. Gardner at the same price.

As was announced the church at Freedom met Saturday for the purpose of having a roll call, calling a pastor for the ensuing year, and to attend to other matters of business. Owing to the untimely rain the church was as large a crowd present as was expected, but those present seemed to enjoy the services.

The roll of the membership was read and Keer, H. P. Hatchett, the present pastor was again given a unanimous call. Dinner was served at the church and there was more left than ever one said enough, may the Lord's sacred blessings rest on this

BATHING IN THE SEA.

It originated in England in the eighteenth century. Sea bathing had its origin in England about 1750, when the physician Richard Russell published his treatise on the virtues of sea water. The healing virtues of the sea bath were not understood, nor was the practice of sea bathing generally resorted to. There seems to have existed a horror of the sea; indeed, in medieval times a compulsory dip in its waters was a sentence often passed on the public offender. In the earlier decades of the nineteenth century western Europe suffered heavily under "king's evil," the popular name for that tuberculous affection which scourged all classes from poor to peasant.

Dr. Russell, a Sussex practitioner, observed that dwellers on the coast used to drink of the sea water, and he, in turn, even washed his sores in it and bled them up with sea water. Having satisfied himself as to the efficacy of the practice he began to prescribe for his patients with most satisfactory results. His treatise resulted in the counts becoming largely patronized by the ailing, and the demand for sea-bathing was soon a growing quality. This gradually spread to the continent. Then people commenced to seek the fresh water of the sea, and the sea-bathing was a good thing, and the vital importance of the skin as an excretory was greatly emphasized somewhat later in 1834, when the morning "bath" was instituted and has since acquired a worldwide reputation.

OLD JEWISH TRADITION.

The Way the Israelites of Old Times.

The Jews of eastern Palestine and Asia Minor have a queer tradition which has survived the centuries and tells of a remote period in their history when every fully developed infant was equipped with three perfect eyes. The two main eyes were situated in the front part of the head, just as eyes are today, but the third was located in the back part of the head just above the nape of the neck in the edge of the hair. This wonderful third eye in man was not a "third" eye of cat, but was closed by divine injunction on the day when Moses was given the tables of stone. He was given the tables of stone, and he was given the third eye. You remember that God's command on the day that the tables were renewed was to the effect that no man should be seen in the vision of the holy mount. (See Ex. xxxiv, 23.) The believers in this strange tradition say that Moses supplemented God's command by ordering the faithful who were encamped in the valley to turn their heads from the mountain. They did, but took good care to maneuver the eyes that were situated in the back of the head. Moses, noticing this show of duplicity on the part of his followers, asked God to close the third, or rear, eye, and since that day the Israelites, in common with the remainder of humanity, have been forced to depend on two eyes only.

Bears of Oklawaha Swamp.

The great Oklawaha swamp begins not far from Waycross, Ga., and extends into Florida for a distance of about fifty miles, running over into Florida. Here in this vast tract of desolate bog and swampy land, there are thousands of black bear and deer and wild turkeys and other number. The whole region is a hunter's paradise, and yet so abundant is the game in this remote and desolate country that it does not seem to diminish in spite of the hunters. The bears weigh from 200 to 300 pounds and get in a great part of their time peering upon the pines of the farmers. If forced into a fight they are dangerous antagonists, but deer and the like, of which they make savory stews, like our species.

San Geronimo.

In the archipelago of Mergul, off the coast of lower Burma, Asia, live the "sea grapes." Instead of carts, iron covered boats, in which, with their families, dogs, cats, chickens and pigs, they float about on the sea and wander from island to island. By day they fish or harpoon turtles or dive for oysters, but every night they put back to the shore. If the weather is bad at sea they land with their dogs and then perch, catnap, and sleep, and the like, of which they make savory stews, like our species.

An Artist's Criticism.

Probably no two artists ever criticized each other more freely than did Paul and Northrup. Yet they remained fast friends. At one time Paul was in London at Northrup's painting of the angel meeting Balaam and his ass. "How do you like it?" asked Northrup after a long silence. "Northrup," replied Paul promptly, "you're an angel at an ass, but an ass at an angel."

F. H. Ash sold a sow and five pigs to George Keeling, of Willisburg for $11.

Mr. J. W. Grider, of Willisburg, was here last Saturday on business.

The farmer's harvest term is here. The sun is hot but there must be something doing. The wheat is finer than it has been for years.

Mr. R. C. Pinkston is undergoing a treatment to regain flesh. He said that he had been gradually going down ever since last November but the cause is unknown.

F. H. Ash and wife spent Sunday at Van Buren with his mother and friends.

It seems as though our letter from last week has caused quite a talk throughout this part of the county. The farmers say if it can't be a State law we can take a vote and have a dog law in Washington county. We hope that every man will raise his voice and say to his neighbor that we are going to stop some of this sheep killing, hydrophobia and other things to numerous to mention that are due to the starved no count dogs. We hope the other correspondents will help us out and also help the NEWS LEADER as well.

Ashtoria Sufferers Should Know This.

Foley's Honey and Tar has cured many cases of asthma that were considered hopeless. Mrs. Adolph, Bueing, 701 West Third St., Davenport, Iowa, writes: "A severe cold contracted twelve years ago was neglected until it finally grew into asthma. The best medical skill available could not give me more than temporary relief. Foley's Honey and Tar was recommended and after fifty cent bottles entirely cured me of asthma which, had been growing on me for twelve years, and if I had taken it at the start I would have been saved years of suffering." Real Wild West.

The extreme Fast End of Louisville was given a taste of Wild West life yesterday morning when a herd of twenty wild Texas horses, which were being taken from the stable of Hudson Bros. & Co., 1050 East Main street, to the Bourbon stock yards, at Johnson and Main streets, became stampeded in the front of the stock yards. The terrified animals dashed out West to Market, down Market to Jackson and out Jackson to Jefferson, where they were brought to a stand by a barricade of wagons formed for that purpose.

In their mad career the horses endangered hundreds of pedestrians, as well as narrowly averted collision with vehicles. They overran sidewalks and compelled people to seek shelter behind gates and doors. Fortunately no one was injured. The horses were unbroken colts from the plains of Texas and were the property of Hudson Bros. & Co.—Herald.

Harmless.

The Department of Agriculture has just issued an interesting bulletin which explodes the old story that cabbage snake worms, or hair worms, are poisonous and when eaten in cooked cabbage are the cause of death.

The cabbage snake, horror, was in many respects like the kissing bug. It originated in the fall of 1908 by the discovery of the so-called cabbage snake, and species of hair worm, in the heads of cabbage in Tennessee, South Carolina and Louisiana. Rumors of persons being poisoned by eating cabbage affected by the hair worm were magnified by the yellow journals into a genuine scare pervaded the heads of cabbage eaters all over the country. The result was that the cabbage growing industry was paralyzed, and the falling off of custom was the severest blow the truck gardeners of the country ever experienced. Fed by erroneous reports evidently injected in many cases by unscrupulous persons, the scare soon became wild - spread causing general fear of poisoning from Virginia and West Virginia southward, through the same states as was first affected in 1903 and into Florida, Kentucky, Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Oklahoma and Colorado especially, and there was scarcely a state in this union where it was not felt. The Department of Agriculture, after a long series of experiments in feeding the cabbage snake worms, raw and cooked to rabbits, guinea pigs and other animals, and in injecting the juice of the worms by podermically, declares that none of the reports has any foundation, in fact, and that the worms are perfectly harmless. The length of the cabbage snake, the department says, varies from two to nine inches instead of nine feet, as some one of the sensational newspapers have reported.

Bright Outlook

According to the experts of the Department of Agriculture at Washington, the tobacco crop of Kentucky is especially promising this year. This is especially true of the crop in the Burley district, where there is said to be an increase in acreage approximating 25 per cent.

Reports to the department concerning the condition of the plants, the character of the season, transplanting, etc., vary greatly, but on the whole, it may be said that plants are good and plentiful, the season early—in some localities a month earlier than usual—and transplanting well advanced. In a few sections plants along streams have been partly or wholly destroyed by rising waters and excessive rains, and unless the rains soon cease the lowlands cannot be used for tobacco. Complaint of cutworms is general, and in some sections they appear to have done much damage.

It is stated at the department that one of the reasons advanced for the increase of acreage is that the farmers are plowing up grass land and planting it in tobacco, owing to the depreciation in the prices of thoroughbred horses of late years. The good prices of last year and the fact that packing houses have been erected in many counties of the Burley district appear also to have increased the acreage.

INDIAN FIGHT

A Terrific Battle Between Indians and Early Pioneer Settlers of this Section.

Written for the NEWS-LEADER.

Numerous are the stories which have been handed down from one generation to another concerning the conflicts with Indians which the pioneer settlers of the country now embraced by Washington, Anderson and Nelson counties. The writer gathered the facts which make up that narrative below from a reliable source and it can be well vouched for.

About one hundred years ago when the country along Salt River embracing what is now the lower part of Anderson county was thinly settled there came a marauding band of Indians from the direction of Taylorsville, said to be the last band of Indians ever in the country. They killed and scalped a boy on the march which was a cold blooded murder and one for which the last one should have been made to suffer.

The news of their approach and the outrageous murder of the boy spread like wild-fire among the settlers and in a short time a party was organized and in full pursuit of the Indians. They overtook them just as they were crossing the river at what is now known as Oliver's Ford. The battle at once began with the white party on one side of the river and the Indians on the other. The fight lasted for some time as they "look to the trees," the old story of early fighting.

One large warrior more brave than the rest of his party rode into the river as if going over where the whites were stationed but when near the middle of the river he was checked by a bullet from one of the trusty old link rifles of the whites. His horse turned and went straight up the river for more than a hundred yards before this warrior fell and floated down the stream on its current to some place that suited his body for a grave. The Indians at last retreated going in the direction of what is now known as old Clay Lick Church.

Just how many were killed in the fight we are unable to say but an old citizen pointed out to us some graves on a steep bluff overlooking the river and said that they were the graves of the Indians who fell in that battle. It was quite an odd looking place for a burying ground but the graves are yet plainly to be seen and no doubt the remains of the whites as well as the Indians are sleeping the last long sleep of death undisturbed by the howling storms or the rippling of the waves of that stream unless scattered to the four winds of Heaven.

The white party pursued the fleeing Indians on and being unable to overtake them went in camp for the night having out a good number of pickets. It was not long until the howling of owls could be heard all around the camp in the darkness which was a warning of being attacked by the Indians. One man by the name of Hawkins who was on picket and hearing the howling of an owl as it came nearer and nearer to him discovered a shining object glittering in the darkness not far from him. With his rifle he took aim the best he could and fired. That put an end to the owl howling for the night. The next morning he found lying about 15 feet away from him a big six foot Indian shot in the month, and a large gold ring in his nose which was the object he saw and at which he shot. The Indians retreated during the night across Kentucky river and got such a start that the whites were unable to overtake them and after reaching the river decided to return to their homes. It was learned some years afterward from an Indian chief that the object of their raid through the country was to get possession of a large sum of money that had been hidden by the Indians by a twin white oak on the ridge between the two Crooked Creeks, and they being suddenly repulsed and compelled to retreat without their money, and a desire to get their hidden treasure was the object of this hurried raid by the Indians which they were never able to obtain.

Several years ago a company with a fortune teller visited the tree where the money was said to be and dug several holes in search of it and one hole gave evidence of a box or earthen vessel of some kind being taken cut, for the sides of the hole were smooth and contained rust from some kind of an iron vessel. They however denied finding any money but it was believed by many that they put out this report to keep from dividing with the land owner which was the contract before they began digging. And what gave strong evidence that they found the money, they left in the night. The twin oak has since been cut down but the umpire still there.

This report was given to us by a truthful old citizen whose grandfather was in the Indian fight and the account was handed to him by his father and all things go to point out the truthfulness of his story. The writer has seen the stump of the "treasure oak" as it was commonly known many times and many Indian relics and curiosities that had been obtained from the battle field and handed down from father to son and price highly as souvenirs of the last battle with the Indians in that part of the county.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by the use of the Deafness Cure. Deafness is caused by an inflammation of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed, it swells and shuts off the normal circulation of the fluids. The result is, unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; and cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Halls Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Experience in Indiana

Eugene Redding, of New York who is here representing Morin's French Military Band, which opens an engagement Sunday at theockey Club Park, tells an interesting story regarding his experience with the Indians anti-cigarette law. Mons. Redding, the bandmaster, is a Frenchman. While on business in Indiana recently he was charged with a package of cigarettes and proceeded to take a smoke. He was immediately nabbed by a vigilant constable on the lookout for a fee, and hustled to the lock up.

Mons. Redding was duly presented to the court on charge of violating the Indiana law against cigarettes. The proceeding was complete mystery to Mons. Redding, who failed for a time to understand what heinous offense he had committed against the peace and dignity of the great Hoosier State. But the matter was finally explained to him and he, with his French dignity aroused, he said to the court:

"I do not smoke se cigarette for pleasure, your Honor. Ze fact is I am a sufferer of se catarrh, rich I contract in des air country, and I smoke se cigarette for medicine. I am no lawbreaker, but I cannot see how I can be punished for taking se medicine for my affliction."

The court asked for a sample of the cubes cigarettes, and after taking a puff, which set him coughing and sneezing, said: "Dissembled; no one would smoke such vile things unless he was under strong pressure for medication. As for me, I would prefer the disease to the remedy. But say, Frenchy, you ought to be a lawyer instead of an agent for a band."—Times.

GUERRILLA DAYS.

Statements About "One-Arm" Berry's Raid on Lebanon Junction.

LILAC.

Barstons Standard: Please allow me a little space in your paper to make some statements about the "One-Arm" Berry raid on Lebanon Junction and the killing of the Federal soldiers by Henry Magruder. A recent article stated there were fourteen men with Magruder. This is not correct. There were only three others—"One-Arm" Berry, Sue Morday, Bill Mariman and H. N. Magruder. These four (guerrillas as they were called) were in the neighborhood of Lebanon Junction, and they sent word to the Union soldiers that they would come and see them. These were Abe Davis, Bill and Jim Hill, Joe and Dock Barnett, Jim and Charlie Engle, Davis Bradford, Little Bill Mayfield and Mathew Cokerel, of the home boys in blue, and four or five transient soldiers I did not know and a government telegraph operator, who armed himself to assist in capturing the four guerrillas.

Well, the boys did not have to wait long after they got organized until they saw the four guerrillas coming. The citizens were all dodging and hiding to keep out of danger and so were the boys in blue. Some ran one way and some another. Some of the boys hid up in the garret of the hotel. Bill Mayfield went to the Rolling Fork river and crawled under a drift (this he told me himself). But unfortunately, for Jake Winstead, Jim Engle, Joe and Dock Barnett, they were captured and killed. Just these four, (not fourteen), the guerrillas wanted to burn the hotel to get the boys that were hid in the garret loft and did it, and he did Aunt Harriet (Collings told Magruder not to burn the hotel for it was here, and Henry said: "Aunt Harriet, they shall not," and helped to put out the fire. He also told her nothing should be injured that belonged to her. After they put out the fire they left and went up the Wilson creek road.

About three hundred yards above where Mr. Carmel church now stands they met and killed Henry Milligan. They then went on up Wilson creek. It has been said that Magruder burned one man in a car load of hay. This, however, is incorrect. There was no car burned. Magruder was not a Nelson county boy, but was a native of Bell county. I knew him from the cradle to his death. I also knew the four boys that were killed. Played with all of them in my boyhood days.

Cases Reversed

The Court of Appeals: Judge Barker writing, reversed the judgment of the Nelson Circuit Court in the big will case of R. B. Lancaster against S. P. Lancaster's executors and others, and remanded it for further proceedings. The contest is over the will of S. P. Lancaster, who died May 7, 1902. The will was admitted to probate and sustained by a jury in the Nelson Circuit Court. He devised to Celia Mudd, his negro housekeeper, the home farm of 840 acres and all the rest of his estate to S. P. Lancaster's Catholic school for colored persons of Bardston.

The will is assailed for alleged lack of testable capacity and undue influence. The reversal by the court here is because of error in instructions and incompetent evidence.

Judge Paynter delivered an opinion reversing the judgment of the Nelson Circuit Court in the divorce case of Mollie V. McAlpin against Alex. McAlpin, and remanding it for further proceedings. The court gives the woman judgment for $1,000 for attorney's fees but says she is not entitled to either divorce or alimony, and dismisses her petition, giving her the right to file an amended answer and cross petition.—Bardston Standard.

Mad Dog Killed.

Mr. "Gib" Goode probably saved many people from being bitten by a ferocious mad dog yesterday morning about eleven o'clock. Mr. Goode was sitting in his yard, on the Perryville pike, about a half mile from town when a neighbor came rushing in and told of a mad dog just passing the gate. Mr. Goode grabbed his shotgun, and to get his gun, started after the animal. It ran under the ice factory, where Mr. Goode shot it. A number of little children were coming from the city and were near the ice factory when the dog was shot. The animal was going toward the children, and if Mr. Goode had not arrived as soon as he did it would have no doubt bitten some of them. The animal had a bad case of hydrophobia.—Danville Advocate.

Shot and Killed.

Cynthiana, Ky.—While attempting to break into the home of Wm. Martin, a farmer living at Oldville, eight miles west of here, Newt Whalen, a native of Clayville, this county, was shot and instantly killed at 4 o'clock this morning. Whalen was in Cynthiana all of yesterday drinking hard, and on his road home stopped at Martin's house, demanding that he be admitted, saying that he wanted to kill a young woman living there. He was told by Martin that the young woman was not there, and to leave the premises. Not believing Martin, Whalen broke in the kitchen door and was advancing with an open knife, when Martin fired two loads from a shot gun, tearing Whalen's head almost off. Martin, who was sick in the house, it is said, will die from the shock. Martin surrendered to the authorities here.

Killed by Lightning

During the thunder storm Monday afternoon lightning entered the chimney of the house on the Burgin farm occupied by W. S. Gammon and killed Mrs. Kity Edgerton. She was in an upstairs room and when the lightning struck the chimney, she was lying on the bed. The shock must have been a very severe one, for the "old" had torn her shoes from her feet and had turned her face back. A little child was in the room with her at the time but was not injured. Mrs. Gammon was a native of Danville and was 75 years of age, but had been making her home with Mrs. Gammon, her sister, for some months.—Harrisburg Herald.
